

TAKING BOARD MINUTES

The purpose of taking minutes at a board meeting is to provide an accurate record of the decisions and actions taken by the board of directors. This serves not only as a documented history of the board's decisions and actions, but can also provide legal protection for the organization and the board of directors.

The minutes need not record a detailed transcription of everything that was discussed at a meeting. This is unnecessary, and in fact may include information that might be harmful to the organization if read by someone with access to the minutes or by a court reviewing board actions. At most, the minutes should include a brief summary of the important discussion points.

What to include in the board meeting minutes

Board meeting minutes are legal documents, and certain information is important to include.

- Record the date, time, and location of the board meeting.
- Identify whether the meeting is a regular or special meeting.
- Record all directors who are present and absent.
- Record all guests who are present.
- Record if any participants arrive late or leave early.
- Identify whether a quorum was present at the meeting.
- Identify any information or reports that are received.
 - Do not record the reports verbatim. Briefly summarize only the important points.
 - Include a list of any materials distributed.
 - Record information that protects the organization (e.g. reviewing financial statements).
- Briefly summarize important discussion points.
 - Do not record the discussion verbatim.
 - Document any potential or actual conflicts of interest, and how those conflicts were handled.
 - Record when a board member recuses himself/herself from a discussion (for example, due to a conflict of interest).
 - For important decisions, briefly summarize any alternatives that were considered. This can protect the organization by showing diligence and reasonable care.
- Record all motions, resolutions, decisions, and other actions taken by the board of directors, including the outcome of votes.
 - All motions should be recorded in the minutes, no matter what is the outcome of the vote.

- The wording of the motions and resolutions should be recorded precisely as stated. If they are unclear, they should be clarified before the vote is taken.
- Include the names of any directors who dissent or abstain. This is particularly important to limit any liability related to the action.
- The names of the directors who move and second motions do not need to be recorded.
- Identify any next steps or action items that have been assigned.
- Identify the date, time, and location of the next board meeting if known.
- Identify the name of the person recording the minutes.

Tips and suggestions for preparing board meeting minutes

- The person who is taking meeting minutes should generally not be an active participant in the meeting.
- That person must sit where all discussion can be heard.
- Ideally, do not take an audio recording of the meeting. If this is required, destroy the audio recording as soon as the minutes have been approved. An audio recording of a meeting may include information that might be harmful to the organization.
- Use the same template for your meeting minutes to reduce preparation time and to give board members a consistent format of the minutes.
- Use the meeting agenda to outline the minutes before the meeting has even started.
- Write objectively.
- Do not record the amount of time spent on particular items.

After the board meeting

- Prepare the board meeting minutes as soon as possible after the board meeting takes place, while the details are still fresh.
- Before the minutes are distributed, the chair should review a draft.
- Distribute the final draft of the minutes to the full board, including members who did not attend the meeting.
- Distribute the final draft within a reasonable timeframe. Generally, the sooner the better.
- At the start of the next board meeting, review the minutes from the previous board meeting. This should be a standard item on the agenda. Discuss any needed changes to the minutes, then amend the minutes and approve the changes. Forward a final approved copy to the PPF office.
- The secretary should keep the final approved board meeting minutes securely in the Chapter's records. Securely shred or delete all drafts.
