

Finding committed and active volunteers is a “challenge” listed annually on Chapter Annual Reports. Where can Friends Groups look for new energy and engagement?

Idea: Speaking engagements with local service organizations

Why: Potential volunteers and/or donors.

Who:

Rotary Clubs: <https://www.rotary.org/en/search/club-finder>

Lions Clubs: <https://directory.lionsclubs.org/>

Kiwanis: <http://locator.kiwanis.org/>

Women’s Clubs <http://www.gfwc.org/> or check your directory for a local women’s club near you

Garden Clubs: <http://www.pagardenclubs.org/>

Generation On: (youth service club) <http://www.generationon.org/service-clubs/join/about>

AARP Chapters: <https://secure.aarp.org/applications/VMISLocator/searchChapterLocations.action>

Young Professional Organizations: Google ‘young professionals’ to find a club near you.

Leadership X: These are community leadership programs that are often looking for projects to sharpen the participants’ skills.

Google ‘leadership X’ to find a program near you (Leadership Harrisburg, Leadership York, etc.)

Sister organizations who may lend expertise or contacts

Idea: Reaching out to high schools and colleges

Why: Potential expertise and volunteers.

Who: Choose colleges and high schools within a radius of your park or forest. Research their majors and identify potential partners based on areas of expertise. Also consider honor societies, student councils, fraternities, sororities, student clubs.

Idea: Preparing a business card to hand out to users of the park or forest

Why: Recruit volunteers and build awareness

Who: See sample below

The Laurel Ridge Runners

Work.
Eat.
Smile.

YOU'RE WELCOME!

You'll find us out here a couple of times a year. We can always use more hands.

*If you can join in, contact:
Mike Mumau, Park Manager
Laurel Hill State Park

Idea: Creating posters/displays to show how funds are used by the friends.

Why: Facilitate understanding that funds are reinvested into the park/forest to increase visitor experience. Also to assist in raising funds and celebrating successes.

Who: Prince Gallitzin does this well.

Idea: Join and/or visit your local chambers of commerce

Why: The chamber is a network of business leaders who benefit from state parks and forests and from the work that you are doing. They are potential partners, in-kind and financial donors, and board members.

Who: Search your local communities for their chamber contacts. Many chambers have mixers where you can attend for low to no fee. You may also want to invite the chamber to host a meeting at your park or forest or to have a mixer at your parks or forests.

Idea: Host a documentary showing over the winter!

Why: People are looking for things to do, and hosting a documentary showing invites people into your park for a low-key event where you have an opportunity to talk to them and share with them what you are doing. PPF has a variety of documentaries that you can borrow or stream that do not require a permit to use.

Who: Visit PAConservationHeritage.org website for materials and information on how to host a showing, building a panel discussion, sample press releases and more. If you schedule a showing, PPF Jenna (jbehlinger@paparksandforests.org) can supply you with materials you may find helpful as well as make sure it gets on both the PPF and the Conservation Heritage websites.

Idea: Community open house

Why: To showcase your park or forest as well as your work. To recruit potential new members and volunteers.

Who: Meet with your park manager or district forester to plan an open house.

Idea: Social Media

Why: People use it.

Who: If you have a social media account, make sure that it is current by posting a few times a week. You can also repost information from relevant organizations, such as our FB page, your park/forest FB page, DCNR, etc. To learn more about Facebook, visit the PPF website at PAParksandForests.org and look under Friends Resources for a video on FB. In addition, PPF Tasha (tferris@paparksandforests.org) sends a monthly suggestion list of things to post.

Idea: Have regularly scheduled work days so that folks get ‘into the habit.’

Why: People like predictability.

Who: You! Set regular meeting dates or work days so that folks get in the habit of participating.

Idea: Be specific about what you want a volunteer to do.

Why: When folks say “Do you want to volunteer?” that might mean an hour commitment or 20 hours! Being specific—and starting small—is a great way to engage people.

Example: Hey Dan, I know that you like photography. We need a volunteer to judge our photo contest. It would take about two hours on a Saturday in January. Will that work for you?
